

Mark is the Vice President of Finance for Albers Aerospace and part of the ownership group. The company is headquartered in the Dallas area and is comprised of Three Business Units: (1) Manufacturing, (2)

Engineering, Aviation, & MRO, and (3) Innovative Technologies.

Mark's primary responsibility within the Albers organization is to drive financial excellence through timely accurate reporting and analytics for all Albers business ventures.

Mark has over 30 years of finance experience that span both commercial and Department of Defense (DoD) manufacturing/service organizations, the majority of which was spent in an executive finance role with a Fortune 200 company. The understanding of differing compliance/regulatory requirements, fully integrated software platforms coupled with full financial responsibility for a large-scale high tech vertically integrated manufacturing operation provide Mark with a comprehensive, highly versatile financial and operational skill base.

Mark started his career with DoD contractor Superconductor Technologies and moved up through the finance ranks working with a couple of publicly traded companies. The majority of Marks career was spent in a Sr Finance role with the Maritime division of L3Harris Technologies.

In addition to Mark's professional career, he holds a bachelor's degree in finance from Cal State Northridge and has held several positions on non-profit boards. Mark also currently holds a publicly elected position with the Santa Ynez River Water Conservation district in his hometown of Santa Barbara CA.
